Ari Emanuel Endeavors to Sell in Mandeville Canyon

William Morris Endeavor co-CEO Ari Emanuel has placed his modern art-filled contemporary residence in the celeb-favored Mandeville Canyon area of Los Angeles up for grabs with an A-list price tag just shy of $19 million. Designed by L.A.-based architect Marc Whipple and inspired by legendary Mexican architect Ricardo Legorreta, the striking residence was acquired by the Hollywood power player just over three years ago for a bit more than $16.5 million.

A carefully arranged assemblage of cubic shapes punctuated by slender windows and vast expanses of glass, the single-level modern Mediterranean sits on three-quarters of an acre with four bedrooms and 4.5 bathrooms in just over 5,700 square feet. A detached guesthouse defined by a monolithic smooth concrete exterior wall pierced by a scattershot assortment of small windows offers a double-height lounge with fireplace plus a full kitchen, lofted bedroom and bathroom.

Fluidly integrated but clearly defined living spaces include an airy living room with huge expanses of chalky white walls and a formal dining room featuring a minimalist fireplace below a cleverly placed skylight. With stainless steel countertops, a sleek mix of unadorned white and charcoal cabinetry and a built-in dining table attached to the long center island, the galley kitchen is open to a family room that features a theatrical fireplace set into an otherwise solid wall of glass. A semicircular, lake-size swimming pool dramatically meets the edge of the back of the house next to a sheltered dining patio and gives way to a verdant sweep of liberally irrigated lawn.

So the scuttlebutt goes, the property was leased by comedian Chelsea Handler in 2010 for about $35,000 per month, and the adjacent property, a 4,300-square-foot fixer-upper on nearly half an acre that Emanuel snapped up last year in an off-market deal valued at $11.5 million, “could also be available” for purchase, per marketing materials, at an additional, undisclosed amount.

Ocasek, Porizkova List Manhattan Townhouse

Almost a year after top-earning 1980s supermodel Paulina Porizkova announced, via social media, that she and veteran new wave rock star Ric Ocasek of the Cars had “peacefully” split up a year earlier, following almost three decades of marriage, the erstwhile couple’s Manhattan home, a handsome townhouse on a pretty, tree-lined block in the Gramercy Park neighborhood, has come up for sale at $15.25 million. The former couple — he inducted last year into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame and she a Czech-born and Sweden-raised two-time Sports Illustrated cover model — stand to reap a fortune on the 23.5-foot-wide townhouse they acquired for $2.5 million a few months before their August 1989 marriage. Originally built in the mid-1800s, rebuilt in 1919 and subsequently extensively updated, the four-floor, elevator-equipped Federal-style residence offers four and potentially more bedrooms and three full and two half bathrooms in almost 5,800 square feet.

With wall-to-wall cheetah-print carpeting, the grandiosely double-height living room stretches almost 35 feet long with a massive, minimalist fireplace and a towering wall of windows that open to a south-facing garden. A mezzanine-level family room and office area with built-in desk space overlooks the living room, while the finished basement unsurprisingly houses a recording studio. Wrapped in cloying, hot-pink-on-bubble-gum-pink striped wallpaper with riotously floral carpeting, the master bedroom opens to a private terrace. Z

Palihotel Expands Brand to Culver City

Palihotel has opened in Culver City, along with a signature restaurant and bar, Simonette. The 49-room property was built in 1927 as the West End Hotel, a boarding house with an art deco facade that has been restored in a historically sensitive remodel. Rooms include Palisociety bath amenities, rain showers, fully stocked minibars and laptop-compatible safes. Simonette offers indoor and outdoor seating along with a central bar featuring a French bistro all-day menu. The boutique lodgings are convenient to Sony as well as Apple and Amazon’s soon-to-open office buildings. PAT SAPERSTEIN
